(A/N: This is from the POV of David, the traitor of the Animorphs. If you don't like it, that's your headache, and you don't have to read it. Like the others, this one's dark, but it has a slightly insane twist to it. Respectfully submitted, Dark_One Shadowphyre.)

The fools.

How willingly they had accepted me.

How oh, so generous of them

To grant me shelter!

To feed me!

Ha!

Make me feel safe.

It was _her_.

Rachel.

She was the dangerous one.

The one that couldn't be controlled.

I was afraid of her then.

I hate her now.

It was her fault!

All hers!

Her and that bird!

And that kid, Marco

Who saw me with the blue cube.

And Jake,

The one that wanted me to

Dance to his tune.

Even seemingly sweet, gentle Cassie

Turned against me.

All of them!

Their fault!

They stole my life!

Stole my happiness.

They couldn't stand to see me

Live a normal,

Mundane,

Happy life.

And when I try to get back

A little bit of what they took,

What do they do?

They sic _her_ on me.

They hunt me.

Trap me.

As a rat.

And two hours

Were up long ago.

I don't know why I cried for mercy.

I wouldn't get it from _her_.

Or her pet Andalite.

They might have just as well

Fed me to that damn bird of theirs!

But no!

They prolonged my suffering,

Leaving me behind

On a rock

In the ocean

With no way back.

Gone over to the yeerks?

Joined Crayak?

Maybe I would have.

It couldn't have been worse

Than my present fate.

And why did they do this to me?

All because they thought they saw

A traitor in their midst.

End
file.
